Thursday ~ June 9, 2005

(optional half-day field trip)
Fee: $125

Come join a panel of internationally recognized experts as they explore and reveal innovative and timely examples of resolving NRD liability through habitat restoration projects.

These real-world examples will include “how to” restore impaired river, wetland and forest systems. We’ll also explore invasive species control and their holistic connection to watershed improvements. Settlements and projects including restoration of oil damaged marshes, landfill remediation (brownfields to greenfields), riverine and public access amenities in resolving NRD liability in urban and rural settings, will be explored. This symposium will also address elements and key aspects of an amicable NRD restoration process—from its genesis in successfully negotiating a voluntary settlement, to the planning, design and restoration construction phase.

On the morning of day two, the symposium concludes with an optional field trip to review a salt marsh restoration -soup to nuts- in the Hackensack Meadowlands. Experience science in action as our panel of experts provides their critique and peer review of this important restoration project.

Who Should Attend

This course is ideal for consultants, ecologists, attorneys engaged in NRD settlement negotiations, environmental scientists, landscape architects, biologists and natural resources managers.
